adopting a Joint and Expeditionary mindset. LTG William Wallace said, " In our wellintended direction of trying to develop very technically competent soldiers in branches of the service, perhaps we lost some of the edge associated with being a soldier" (Naylor 2003, 14). The trend, that arose from the very technical developments in the Army, that the soldier is a technician first and a warrior second is being rectified by GEN Schoomaker's program to instill the " Warrior Ethos." This ethos instills the belief that every soldier is a soldier first and that should be his or her primary focus. As we move into a new dynamic NL/ NC, asymmetrical battlefield that today's soldier encounters, it is critical that all soldiers are able to fight and defeat or suppress and escape (based on the size of the threat) an adversary. This capability requires more offensive vice defensive
